

~Setup~

Shuffle all the decks, then give each player a character card.

Determine a player order, each player throws one dice, the bigger number wins, depending on the other results the player order will go clockwise or counterclockwise.

~Board Phase~

All players draw Accusation/Excuse cards until they have the number of cards their character indicates. Then, the Detective Card for this turn is revealed.

All players roll their die and move on the board.

If a player finds themselves in the Corner, or passing through the corner, they may change directions. Once all players have moved, enter the discussion Phase!

~Discussion Phase~

The players will take turns responding to the Detective's question, while trying to implicate one another in the crime, they'll respond constructing a narrative, to do so they must use a card, and include that card inside their narrative. Determine a temporary order like you did at Setup!

There is but one key rule: You cannot move your character outside the USJ.

After each player has had their turn, if there's an accusation played, then the accused will defend themselves using cards and building on top of the narrative. Otherwise, at least one player must accuse another one before continuing, leading into the defense.

Once a player defends themselves, all other players can jump in with their own cards to build further on the narrative, either building suspicion towards the accused or others.

Afterwards, if no one wishes to add anything, or all cards have run out, the Discussion Phase ends with a quick vote. On 3, all players will point towards another one, the one most pointed at gets a suspicion point.

At any point, you can draw an Event Card, for an extra Accusation/Excuse card.

~Winning and Losing~

You lose if you gain 3 suspicion points, or if you have the most suspicion points after all detective cards have run out. In the case of a tie a quick tiebreaker Discussion is held, and then it's only possible to vote between the tied.

The loser must admit to the crime and explain how they did it!

Number of players: 3+

Everything in the game is inspired by the USJ aesthetic and the stereotypes of the students.

NARRATIVE

A student from the USJ has been murdered and a group of students are the suspects of this horrific assassination. The group has been locked up with the Detective until the murderer is discovered.

This astute detective has an idea to unmask the killer, throw questions at them and get them each to give their version of events and once the betrayals begin get them to vote amongst themselves who they think is the suspect.

Whoever has been voted for the most times at the end of the interrogation is guilty.

GAME RULES

Types of cards:

ACCUSATION/EXCUSE: These types of cards can be used to make an accusation to someone or excuse yourself by using the image or texts that appear on the card during your defense.

WEAPON: This card shows the image of a weapon that maybe was used during the murder, the deck of weapons is duplicated, it will be used to get the murder weapon at the start of the game and as an accusation/excuse card.

LOCATION: This card shows the image of a location that maybe was where the murder happened, the deck of locations is duplicated, it will be used to get the murder location at the start of the game and as an accusation/excuse card.

CHARACTER: This card shows your character, and his abilities.

DETECTIVE QUESTIONS: This card makes a question that all the players will have to answer during the debate phase.

EVENT: This type of card makes the player change the way they talk or act during their defense.

LUCKY: These cards can make the player lose a card, advance some positions etc...

BOARD:

Set-up:

First choose how many suspicious tokens it takes for the game to end. For a short 20 minute round,

The Weapon and Location decks must be shuffled; the topmost cards will then be drawn and placed face down on the board, without anyone knowing their content.

Shuffle the Character deck, then each player grabs a Character card.

Shuffle the Accusation/Excuse and Detective decks.

Depending on their Character card a player must draw a specific number of cards, and place their chosen token on the board accordingly with the Location shown in the Character Card.

From here the game begins!

The process of a turn:

This game functions on a Phase system, with a rather simple loop.

->Board -> Debate -> Voting -v

Board Phase

A game starts at the Board phase, in it, each player will roll a dice, and move the according positions along the board. When in one of the corners of the board, the player can choose to move a token in any of the two available directions, however, they cannot change direction anywhere else, and will have to reach a corner to be able to change direction again.

Normal positions will have a special effect, when landing on one one of the following will happen:

Free space: Nothing happens.

Detective: You can force another player to discard one of their cards.

Accusation/Excuse: Draw 1 card from the Accusation/Excuse deck.

Lucky: Draw 1 card from the Lucky deck.

Weapon: Roll a die, if the result is higher or equal to 4, reveal the top card in the Weapon deck, that weapon is the murder weapon used. If there already was a revealed Weapon, put it at the bottom of the deck before revealing a new one, the old Weapon turned out to be a fluke.

Location: Roll a die, if the result is higher or equal to 4, reveal the top card in the Location deck, that location is where the murder took place. If there already was a revealed Location, put it at the bottom of the deck before revealing a new one, the old Location turned out to be a fluke.

After everyone has rolled their dice and moved in the board, it'll be turn for the Debate Phase.

Debate Phase

Draw 1 card from the Detective deck, all of the players will have to respond to the question through this phase.

Continuing from the turn order, the first player will play a card and accuse another player, you have to use the title, subtitle, image or the description from the card as inspiration for the accusation (keep in mind to respond to the Detective's question!). The next player in the turn order will accuse or excuse themselves using the same method.

Alternatively, if a player believes they don't have a good card for the situation, they can choose to draw an event card to draw one more accusation/excuse card.

When every player has played a card, the next phase begins.

Voting Phase

After a Debate is over, one of the players will count down from 3, on go, players must point to another one, the player most pointed at will gain one suspicious token.

DETECTIVE

Where were you at the time of the murder?

What were you doing at the time of the murder?

Do you have any suspicions?

Have you seen anything suspicious?

//Everybody has to show an object, excuse yourself about how do you found it.

LUCKY

Unlucky! Lose a card...

I have an idea! Draw an accusation/Excuse card.

My head's spinning! Turn around.

I need a break. Move to the nearest Free Space.

A portal? Move to one of the buildings.

Detective's favorite! Keep this card in your inventory, it isn't an excuse/accusation, but can be thrown away instead of one of those.

What's happening?! Grab an event card, it will play into effect when the accusation round starts.

Woah, a tornado! Every player must give their cards to the player on their right.

EVENT

___ You feel confused about yourself. In the next turn you will act as another character in-game.

It's time to be honest. Tell aloud what you think about the player on your left.

Sus-moment. In your next turn, any of your sentences must finish with a –sus.

Oulala! Until the next turn, you become an Erasmus French Student, you must turn your accent to fit in the Croissant Country.

Achoo! The Cierzo in Zaragoza is so cold you became sick. For the next turn you can't talk. So, you must make signals to communicate.
